My personal philosophy for life is leadership through compassion. Leadership has many different looks and functions, but if there is no compassion for others involved, leadership is simply not possible. I want to challenge all Sorors to think about the leaders they would like to become.

Does that leadership include helping Sorors who have lost their way? Does that leadership include listening, not only to hear, but to understand?

When I think about a sincere sisterhood like Alpha Kappa Alpha, I think of the compassion and empathy needed to create an organization that seeks to alleviate the issues of our communities. Ethel Hedgemon Lyle, the guiding light of our organization, saw the gaps that needed to be filled at just twenty-one years old. Imagine that all of us placed her purpose "to raise her people up and make them better" at the forefront of our minds when we complete service projects and attend chapter meetings and sisterly relations events. Sorors, with that level of leadership through compassion, we can move one step closer to capturing a vision fair.

Leadership for Undergraduate Sorors

Targets

A “Real” Sisterhood

Build lasting bonds with fellow chapter members through a service-focused lens; place focus on Sisterly Relations that positively impact the community

Generation AKA

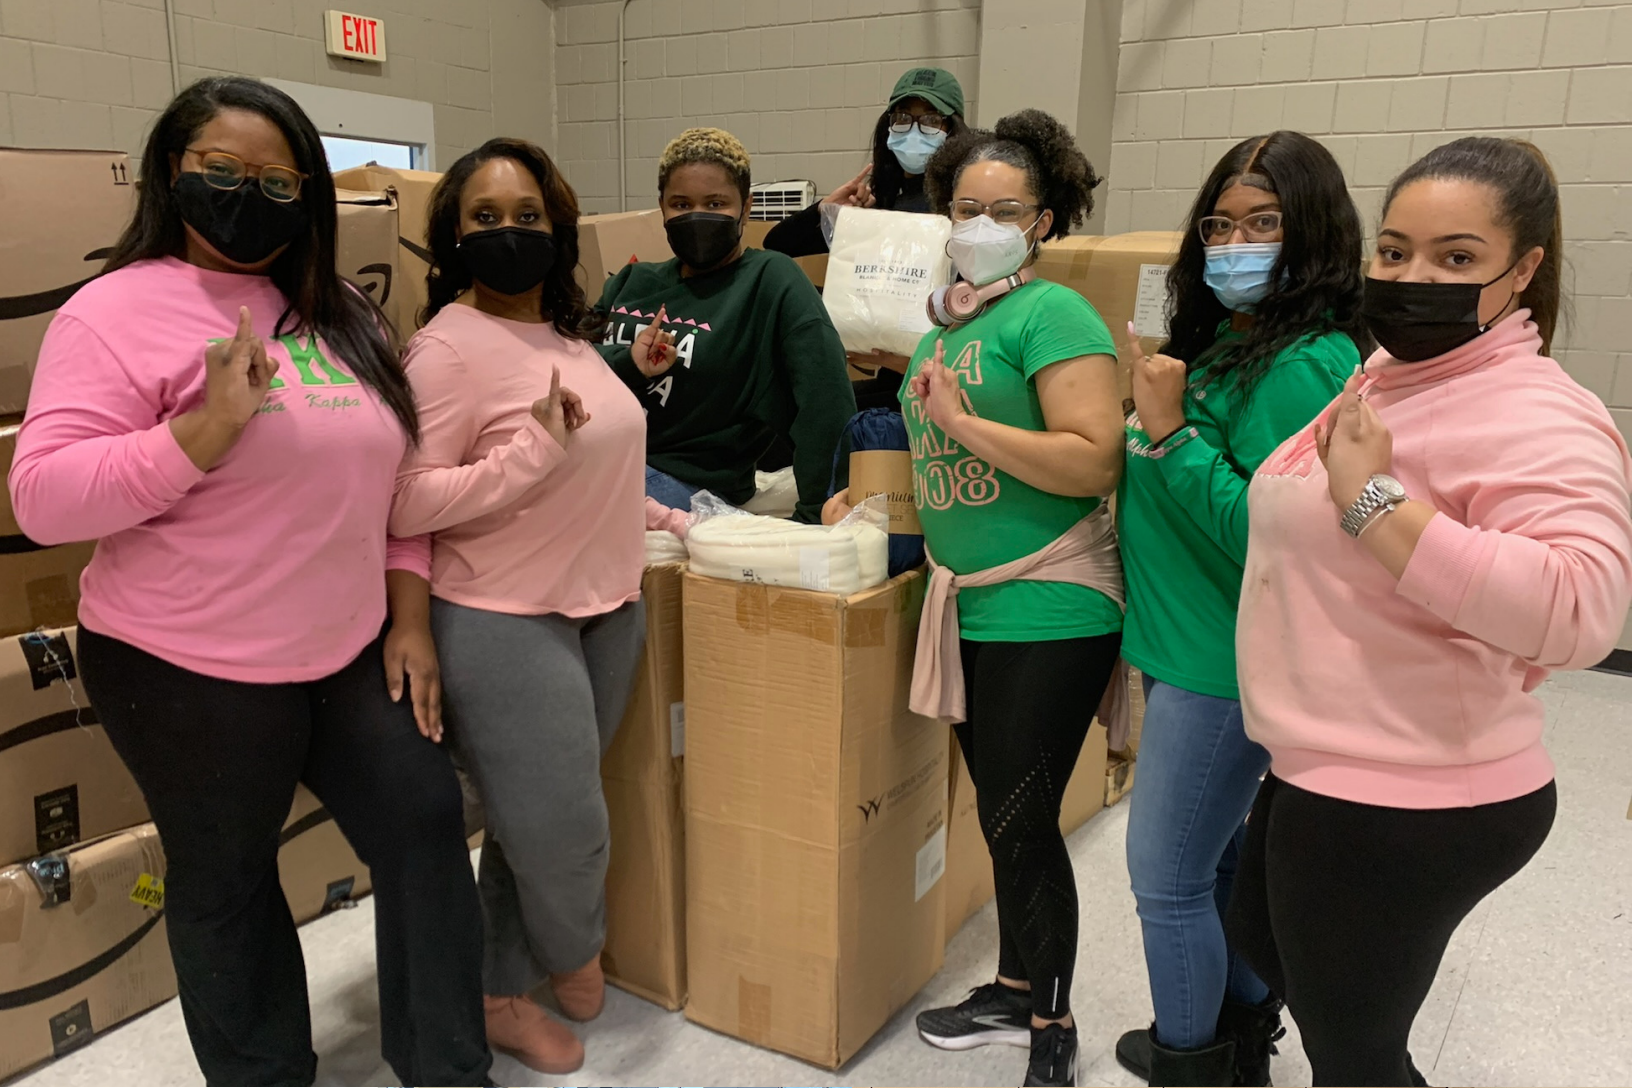

Partnering with seasoned Sorors to foster positive intergenerational communication on critical issues; building communities of AKAs at all ages and experience levels to create culturally responsive programming and activities

“Starting From the Top”

Establishing an intense focus on mental wellness and self-care, especially for college students; creating space in meetings and workshops for productive conversations about depression, anxiety, and suicide in Black women

Sorors, it has been the pleasure of a lifetime to uphold the high moral and ethical standards of our great sisterhood. Although I have not been a member of Alpha Kappa Alpha for a long time, I have a sincere vision of what we can become. As an undergraduate Soror, I have seen the power of AKA to change young women's lives, including my own. As we move into a period of transition, I hope that you will trust me to be a steward of excellence, compassion and genuine sisterliness.

Thank you for allowing me the opportunity to share my vision for our sorority. With the ongoing support of my chapter and team, I humbly ask for your vote to be the next Second Supreme Anti-Basileus so that I may continue to help make our sisterhood 'R.E.A.L.!'
